New Resolution mediators specialize in divorce, custody, and family mediation. Caring and compassionate, we empower our clients to resolve personal conflicts. Unlike litigation, which represents conflict as a contest, mediation approaches conflict as a problem to be solved with the help of a professional mediator.

Mediation doesn't dispel the loss, anger, hurt, or frustration people may feel when conflict enters their lives. But it does transform the way they address the conflict, significantly reducing the emotional pain and financial toll of an adversarial litigation. To this end, New Resolution mediators succeed by guiding a constructive exchange that identifies issues, explores interests, and breaks through impasse.

Members of the New Resolution network of independent mediators are client-centered. This means we believe that our clients (sometimes with help from their consultant attorneys) are the best people to decide what agreement to reach. Other mediators are often evaluative, acting like judges to create settlements they believe are best for the parties. The trouble with this is that the mediator's idea of what's best may not be the same as the clients' idea of what's right for them.

I hope you'll consider New Resolution as a resource for your clients. For information to help anyone facing a divorce, custody, family, or other relational dispute, please contact me or visit our award-winning site: www.newresolutionmediation.com.
